SEAN MOORE SECURES 1ST WSOP GOLD RING

On-and-off poker pro achieves vindication with first Circuit title.

Sean Moore secured his first World Series of Poker Circuit title Tuesday evening. The 46-year-old from Omaha, Nebraska finished as the last man standing in Event #7 at Horseshoe Council Bluffs. The $365 Omaha Hi-Lo tournament left Moore with a payout of $8,640, his first WSOP gold ring, and most importantly, vindication.

“I’ve been working so hard. I’ve been to lots of these final tables. All I wanted to do was win a ring. And the money is fantastic, but... I feel vindicated, like I’ve arrived,” said Moore, following his victory. “I’m unbelievably ecstatic right now.”

Moore began playing poker for a living back in 2005, but the career path took a detour in 2009. That is when he reentered the workforce, joining the family-owned insurance agency that his father founded.

“This past November I left the business, went back to poker full time. I plan on playing a lot of events,” Moore detailed. “I plan on spending most of the summer in Vegas.”

After a long stint with the family business, Moore decided to get back into life as a professional poker player. His recent gold-ring triumph provides Moore with a sense of justification toward the decision and is also a ray of redemption.

Moore now lays claim to six WSOP cashes, majority of which stem from the Horseshoe Council Bluffs Circuit series. Although it not a huge quantity, all six cashes are top-ten finishes, begging the fact that it was just a matter of time before Moore broke through to the winner's circle.
