CARY MARSHALL SEIZES 3RD CIRCUIT TITLE

Two-time gold ring winner crushes final table to win gold in final Potawatomi ring event.

Cary Marshall rode a massive chip lead all the way to the winner's circle in the last ring event of the World Series of Poker Circuit series at Potawatomi. The 69-year-old from Sun Valley, Nevada defeated 332 entrants in Event #13: $250 No-Limit Hold'em Double Stack (1 Day) to win $15,272 and his third gold-ring Circuit title.

Going into the final table, Marshall wielded the largest stack in play and never looked back. He scored a majority of the final eight knockouts to take it down.

"It feels really good; I'm happy," Marshall expressed after his victory. "I've had a lot of seconds and thirds on the way here."

Since his last gold-ring victory in 2013, the Circuit regular experienced many close calls. Marshall had three 3rd-place finishes as well as three 2nd-place finishes during the window between rings, one of each coming during the recent Horseshoe Tunica Circuit.

"Got six [cashes] right there. Just barely missed the Casino Championship," said Marshall.

Before his trip to Wisconsin, Marshall went on a heater in Mississippi, cashing six times, including two deep final-table runs. He was narrowly edged out in the Tunica Casino Champion race, during the final event of that series, but somewhat makes up for it by winning a gold ring at Potawatomi.

The $15,272 payday pushes Marshall's WSOP earnings to just over $475,000. More importantly, he picks up 50 more points in the Global Casino Championship race. Marshall now sits with around 150 points, a good position to be in to take a run at the 50 at-large bids to the 2019 GCC.
