Even though he is just 21 years old, Texan Bryan Campanello has spent the better part of the last few months knocking on the door of World Series of Poker stardom. The young pro has six WSOP-related cashes including two final tables on the Circuit. Earlier this year he broke through for one of his first major victories, winning a ring at the Circuit stop at The Lodge Casino in Black Hawk, CO. Campanello scored $21,223 for that performance and it gave him some momentum heading to the summer's WSOP.

Campanello put that momentum to work Saturday, beating out David "Gunslinger" Bach for the $2,500 Seven Card Razz title, winning $178,052 and his first gold bracelet. Although Bach had the edge when it came to experience, laying claim to the $50,000 Poker Players Championship title in 2009, Event 33 was all about Campanello.
