At a similar final table he barely missed making last year, surrounded entirely by players who already had won gold bracelets, party-crasher Paul Volpe proved his poker worth, winning one of the most coveted titles in the game--the $10,000 No-Limit Deuce-to-Seven Single-Draw championship.

Volpe earned $253,524 for the victory, not to mention the bragging rights that come with beating one of the most stacked WSOP final tables in recent memory. Jason Mercier (3rd), Brian Rast (4th), Larry Wright (5th), John Monnette (6th) and Abe Mosseri (8th) were all present in the line-up, as was the reigning WSOP Player of the Year Daniel Negreanu, who was heads-up for a bracelet for the 12th time in his illustrious career. The heads-up battle was so electric, it appeared to have crashed the internet at the Rio, which experienced a total outage during heads-up action. That didn't stop play in the event nor dampen anyone's enthusiasm though.

“It feels amazing to get my first bracelet, especially in the $10K Deuce-to-Seven (event), which is one of the toughest events of the summer,” Volpe said afterward. “I was confident I was going to win. I felt like I was going to win. It was a super-tough table. It was unbelievable getting heads-up against Daniel. If I have to pick one person to beat for my bracelet, it would be him.”
