Phillip Hui is the latest winner of a gold bracelet at the 2014 World Series of Poker. Hui topped a field of 457 players in the $3,000 buy-in Omaha High-Low Split event. He collected first-place prize money totaling $286,976 and his first WSOP gold bracelet.

Just as memorable as the win was the manner in which the poker pro based in San Antonio, Texas engineered the biggest victory of his career. To say this was the most incredible comeback of the series so far might be an understatement. Hui was low on chips at several points during the final table, no more so than when heads-up against Zachary Milchman when the Floridian had Hui outchipped by about an 18 to 1 margin. Yet Hui was able to reverse the tide and dominated the final half hour of the tournament on his way to a huge celebration with fellow WSOP Circuit grinders.
