Matt Grapenthien, a.k.a. “Grapes” won the $10,000 buy-in Seven-Card Stud Championship at the 2014 World Series of Poker. The poker pro who primarily specializes in online play locked down $268,473 for first place. He was also presented with the first gold bracelet of his career.

Grapenthien may be a new name to some, but he’s posted numerous live tournament cashes dating back to 2004. He’s also one of the most respected online cash game grinders, having supported himself exclusively by playing as a pro for nearly a decade. Indeed, Grapenthien’s real forte is Razz and other Stud-related cash games. Accordingly, his victory in this, the highest buy-in Seven-Card Stud event at this year’s series comes as little surprise. What may have actually been a surprise were the group of players he faced and who he defeated heads up for the title.
