Ronald McDonald Wins First Ring in Series' Last Event

Virginia asphalt contractor collects close to $15k for one day's work at Horseshoe Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Md. (May 11, 2017) — Ronald McDonald was quite literally the last man left at the WSOP Circuit Horseshoe Baltimore. McDonald won the series' closing event on Monday, outlasting a tough field of 185 entries in the $365 one-day turbo. The victory earned McDonald his first gold ring in addition to the top payout of $14,429 — not bad a bad wage for the day.

“The Rooster” is a 61-year old asphalt worker from Centreville, Virginia. He was born and raised in the area, and he’s been playing poker on the side for as long as he can remember. “Ever since I was old enough to see over the table,” he said. “Don’t want to work, but I do. I want to play cards full time. This is a whole lot easier.”

Tournament poker is seldom easy, but McDonald enjoyed a relatively smooth run to the title. “Played a great game,” he said of his own performance. “Didn’t make no mistakes. None.”

It’s not like he was keeping things particularly close to the vest, either. McDonald won two significant pots with big call-downs on the way to the final table — one with pocket nines on an ace-king high board, and one with naked pocket deuces. He was correct on both occasions, and he entered the final table second in chips behind Jason Baldrige.

Baldrige ended up on the rail in sixth place at the hands of McDonald, though, and the latter ultimately picked his way into a heads-up match against Brian Caplan. The average stack was desperately shallow for much of the late levels, so things progressed quickly and with much confrontation. There were barely 30 big blinds in play when the last hand was dealt, with McDonald flopping trips tens and turning quads with jack-ten offsuit to defeat Brian Caplan and win the ring.

When asked about his key hands along the way, McDonald recalled those two big pots in which he’d gotten stubborn earlier in the day. “It’s damned if you do, damned if you don’t,” he said. “You’ve got to be into the game 100 percent. I take pride on reading people.”

Event #12 was the last of the 12 gold ring events on the WSOP Circuit schedule at Horseshoe Baltimore. The $365 no-limit hold'em turbo event featured double starting stacks, and it drew a field of 185 entries. That attendance generated a prize pool worth $55,500 which was shared by the final 21 players.

The tournament was held from start to finish on Monday, May 8 beginning at 11 a.m., and the last hand was dealt just before midnight.

The player who accumulates the most overall points during Horseshoe Baltimore's 12 ring events earns the title of Casino Champion and receives automatic entry into the WSOP Global Casino Championship. Additionally, all players who cash in ring events earn points that apply toward the season-long race to claim one of the limited at-large bids. More information on the points system is available on WSOP.com.

All rings at Horseshoe Baltimore are furnished by Jostens, the official ring supplier of the 2016/2017 WSOP Circuit season.
