RONALD BOEHLERT CLAIMS SENIORS TITLE AT COCO

Stepdad of prior Circuit Council Bluffs Main Event winner grabs his own first ring

Sometimes it's about bragging rights, though 64-year-old Ronald Boehlert might not have dared dream he'd own a WSOP Circuit ring. Boehlert's stepson, David Davenport, had taken down the Council Bluffs main event in April, 2008, though Boehlert's own poker excursions were few and far between, since he lives on the South Carolina coast, hundreds of miles from the nearest casino.

This week, though, Boehlert took a road trip on his Harley to southern Florida, staying with his brother-in-law, Dan D'Amico. Both played the Seniors event, though Boehlert made the news this day, making his first cash in a major tour of any sort a Circuit ring-winning effort.

"I can't believe I won a WSOP ring!" exclaimed Boehlert after his win. "I can't believe it!" Nor has he made any particular plans for the winnings, other than to play a few more poker events. And the next time he meets up with stepson Dave, he'll have his own winner's story to tell.
