SEAN CARLSON WINS 1ST CIRCUIT RING AT FOXWOODS

The courier from East Hartford finally wins one after making five final tables

On the final day of the Foxwoods Circuit stop, Sean Carlson has taken down Event 12 for $11,771 and his first ever World Series of Poker Circuit ring. This is far from his biggest career cash, but puts him at around $250,000 in earnings. Carlson is a courier by day, but plays about 100 tournaments a year on the side.

"It feels fantastic," smiled Carlson, with his wife on the rail proudly looking on. "It's my fifth final table and I finally won one." The newly crowned champion explained that he doesn't play for a living but he would like to.

"I've just been watching it (poker) on TV since I was 15, 16 years old. I've been playing at the casino for 15 years now," explained Carlson. "I watch a lot of Twitch. I also do 'Raise Your Edge', and I like to study. You need to do a lot of studying."
