ANDREW ROBINSON WINS 7TH CIRCUIT TITLE

The Choctaw Champ returns to claim his seventh gold ring and third on property.

Andrew Robinson pulled off his seventh World Series of Poker Circuit title run Friday evening and third gold-ring victory at Choctaw Durant. The Poker Pro from Georgetown, Texas meandered through a field of 278 entrants and a stacked final table to take down Event #2: $400 No-Limit Hold'em Double Stack.

Going into Day 2 of the of the tournament, only eight players remained and there were plenty of WSOP accolades among them. Robinson was up against the likes of gold bracelet owner Jim Willerson, two-time Circuit Main Event champ Ryan Jones, and three-time gold ring winners La-La Sengphet and Abraham Araya.

"I mean, I've played with all these people before and I think they are really good, but I trust myself," Robinson admitted.

Assured of his skills, Robinson outlasted the other gold ring winners and eventually found himself heads up against another formidable opponent, Laura Curry.

"She's very aggressive. I mean, she's tough to play against," said Robinson. "Most people are much more passive."

Curry put up a good fight but could not get past her final obstacle. As the runner-up, she walked away with $13,138 and 37.5 Casino Championship points. Robinson claimed the top purse of $21,263, 50 Casino Championship points, as well as gold ring number seven.

Robinson is now the first player to have ever won three WSOP Circuit titles at Choctaw Durant. His other two scores occurred just last season during the January installment of the Oklahoma-based tournament series. On top of that achievement, Robinson has also twice been deemed the Choctaw Casino Champion.

“This has been my favorite stop for quite a while. It’s closest to my house, it’s an easy drive, and the people are great,” Robinson expressed.
